

What is ReadingMate?

ReadingMate is a supplemental reading program that prepares students to read at grade level and develop the necessary reading skills for college and career readiness. It provides a web-based, individualized learning environment. Its instructional design is based on the key points of the Common Core State Standards for English Language Arts and Reading. ReadingMate offers students the opportunity to read independently and comprehend increasingly complex Lexiled® texts from different cultural traditions and time periods.

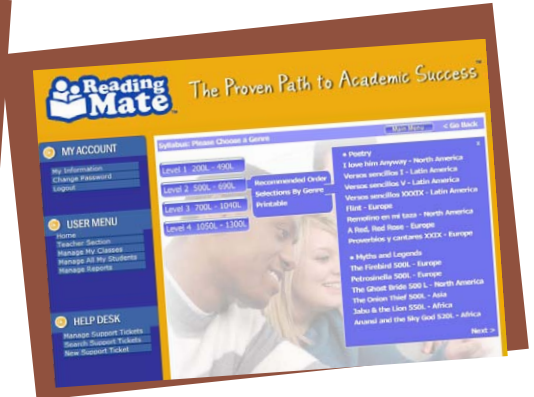

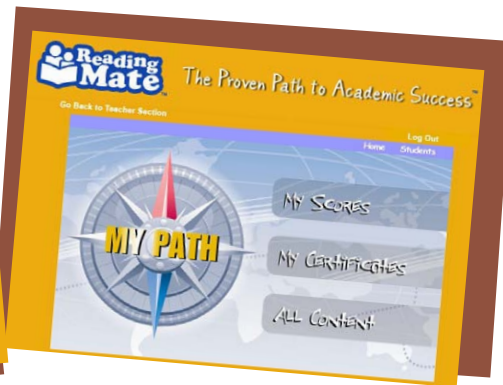

Flexible Implementation

Teachers can implement ReadingMate either as a student-centered, online application, or as a hybrid learning environment that integrates online student work with one-on-one tutorials or small group instruction.

Who should use ReadingMate?

The program is an effective reading intervention for all students, including:

- Tutorial and after-school programs
- English Language Arts (ELA) students reading below grade level
- English Language Arts (ELA) students reading at or above grade level

Tools to Differentiate Instruction

Educators can differentiate their instruction via:

- Student Support Guides for one-on-one tutorials or small group instruction
- Standards-based, comprehensive lesson plans for small-group or whole-class instruction
- Web resources
- A class management module
- Comprehensive assessment and progress monitoring

Monitor Student Progress

ReadingMate monitors the development of standards-based skills and strategies for vocabulary development and reading comprehension. ReadingMate's built-in tools designed for comprehensive assessment and ongoing progress monitoring include:

- Placement and achievement tests
- Individual progress reports
- Skill development reports
- Class, school, and district reports

“ As a principal, it is imperative to have data in order to drive instruction. ReadingMate is a great resource to use to do just that. The placement tests are an excellent way to determine a student’s reading level. Students enjoy working with the program. Overall I would say it is an excellent program. ”
